

Living Spit

GIANTS OF SCIENCE

$$e=mc^2$$

"The best 100 minute comedy show outside of the Edinburgh Fringe"

Western Daily Press

(For 'Six Wives of Henry VIII')

"Brilliantly Bonkers"
Bristol Culture
(For 'Adolf & Winston')

Smc¹²

Hcg³⁵

MELBURY OSMOND VILLAGE HALL | Thurs 18 Oct, 8pm

£9, £6 (u18s), £25 (fam 4 - max 2 adults) on door, if available, or in advance from

Martin Smith & Janet Young 01935 83453 or online at artsreach.co.uk

Artsreach

Blanchards Bailey
Live for Life

Bob's Brilliant Bar & Waine's World Refreshments | Suitable 12+ | Supported by ACE SW, WDDC & Dorset County Councils

Howard Coggins knows nothing about Science.

Stu McLoughlin knows even less.

Nevertheless, they have agreed to give a lecture on the subject, and after enlisting the help of the smartest scientific sages of the ages, that's just what they aim to do.

But even with the likes of Albert Einstein, Galileo, Isaac Newton, Mary Anning and...um...Kriss Akabusi along for the ride, the chances of the dim-witted duo making it through the evening with any sense of dignity remaining intact seems less than likely.

Still, they're determined, like a pair of Atoms missing a couple of electrons, to stay positive.

With jarring jokes, pitiful puppetry, and the silliest of scientific songs, you can expect this raucous romp through the hilarious history of scientific stupidity to be... well, if nothing else, thoroughly entertaining.

It might even be...Scien-triffic!™

"A glorious celebration of silliness, fully appreciated by a packed home crowd."

The Stage

(For 'Elizabeth I - Virgin on the Ridiculous')

"Cleverly written, beautifully acted, and, dare I say it, educational. Howard and Stu are a double act to keep a beady eye on...their versatility and range is outstanding"

Bristol Evening Post

(For 'Six Wives of Henry VIII')